A7 - Dr. Thomas Prestwood Lucas (1801-71)

Dr. Prestwood Lucas was born in Carmarthen in 1801, and graduated MD from Edinburgh in 1825, gaining a Partisian qualification in 1826. Mr. Henry Lucas, his father, was the first physician to the Brecknock Infirmary (1832) and died in office as Mayor of Brecon, 1840. On his death, Prestwood Lucas, who had recently been appointed to the Swansea Infirmary, after 12 years service abroad with the Royal Artillery, took on Henry Lucas's Brecon practice. In 1859 he became a member of the Royal College of Physicians. He became a Town Councillor in 1866, and an Alderman the following year, and was also a Governor of Christ's College and Deputy Lieutenant of the County. He married Sarah (Ker) in 1853, and died in 1871.

A7/1/1 *Press-cuttings book kept by Sarah Lucas; half of it is concerned with cuttings about Rev, Alexander J. Scott, (? a relative) between 1835-1866; the rest consists of cuttings about Dr. Prestwood Lucas, 1854-71.

A7/1/2 Notebook kept by Dr. Lucas, as Medical Superintendent, during the Brecon cholera epidemic of 1854. This includes minutes of the Board of Guardians and other information and probably served as a basis for Dr. Lucas's subsequent report on the epidemic, published by the Board.

A7/1/3 (1-10) Assorted correspondence 1848-1871; including (f2) "Sally Ker's" announcement to her brother David of her impending marriage, 1853.

A8 - Papers of the Breconshire Insurance Committee

In 1912 an Act was passed requiring a fixed contribution to be deducted from the wages of lower-paid "heads of households" (nicknamed the "Lloyd George stamp") to insure them against medical expenses.

Insurance Committees were established in all counties and county boroughs to administer the benefits to the working population. These Committees were composed of local government representatives together with medical and lay representation. They coped with the financial business of the practitioners' treatment costs and "capitation fees", and also with complaints against doctors.

The committees operated until 1948 and the introduction of the National Health Service, proposed by the Beveridge Report and embodied in the Act of 1946. Many of the Insurance Committee's functions, and their extension to other aspects of medical care, were then taken over by the Executive Council.

The Minutes of the Breconshire Insurance (or, from 1944, "Local Medical") Committee comprise nine bound volumes, between 1912-1954, and have been presented to the Brecknock Museum by the Executive Council, on the eve of its replacement by the area medical boards in 1974.
